“Kol Nidrei Sermon - 5772: Vows Worth Making”

Kol nidrei. How has this haunting, evocative prayer come to define what we do here tonight? It isn't poetry -- or prose. It isn't even a prayer. On its face, it is a dry legal formula that annuls vows. The first time we hear about it -- in the eighth century -- great rabbis are already against reciting it. Can we annul vows that easily? Is this what we should be doing on the holiest night of the year? Yet here it is, and here we are. Kol nidrei has outlasted all its critics, defied its opponents, and remains one of our most moving prayers. Why is this?

A great rabbi explained, “because it's what a large part of life and teshuvah are about. Like vows made too quickly, like thoughtless words, we do things we know we shouldn't. And on this night of nights, we look back at the mess we've sometimes made of our lives, the people we've hurt, the mistakes we've made, and the things we should never have done, and say: God, Kulhon icharatna lehon. We regret them all. And if regret can undo a vow, let it undo an action as well. Give us the strength to make things better and begin again, a little wiser this time, a little less sure of ourselves, a little more understanding and patient and humble. Help us undo kol nidrei, ve-esarei, ushevu'ai, all the knots I have tied myself into, and let my life become simple and honest and kind again.”

Let the echoes of our best intentions and our apologies, as well as the silence and hardness of our stubbornness well up this evening. Let us brush ourselves off, take a look at the foundation on which our lives are built, and vow, once again, to rebuild our lives -- not bury what we may be ashamed of, but to vow to become who we were meant to be by building upon who we are -- tonight.

When we visit Israel, we may climb to the top of a tell, a pile of old civilizations, one on top of another. We can see many such hills marking the landscape, reminding us that life and civilization are less about building than about rebuilding.

What is true for many civilizations throughout centuries is true for a single life throughout its years. There is always erosion -- and sometimes just sustaining the blessings we have requires constant rebuilding. We make new configurations of the qualities we have, much as a new culture takes the material from all that went before. Over time, our lives are as tells: the new built on the old with unimagined possibilities unfolding.

What are our unimagined possibilities? We definitely have something here -- something worth blessing, and something worth building upon. We have and are a kehillah kedoshah - a sacred community. I want so very much to name names, but I know I will forget someone, so I will just tell you what they do, and when I'm talking about one or a group of you, I hope that you recognize who you are.

In times of loss and difficulty, we are a place of refuge. We are a small community, and that enables us to reach out to one another in moments of crisis - we are in each other's business and we know and check in on one another when someone is sick or suffering. Some of us provide meals or get someone else to the doctor when they are temporarily out of commission and others help organize and provide

The mission of Temple Beth David is to provide an environment where the concepts of community prayer, education, and service to the greater Jewish community are provided within the context of Conservative Judaism. We pride ourselves on being a friendly, participatory, egalitarian community, welcoming all to be a part of our synagogue family.

Being a member of a synagogue is not easy. And if it seems that Temple always wants more from you, that is only because we do. We want more money, more time, more commitment. We want these things because Temple needs them. Keeping a synagogue running takes a lot -- a lot of money, a lot of volunteer hours, a lot of energy -- and there is nowhere to turn for these precious commodities than to you. So Temple is always asking more of you.

There are times when this feels reasonable, appropriate, even welcome. In fact, one of the biggest impediments to getting donations is the failure to solicit them. And one of the biggest barriers to finding volunteers is failing to ask for help. Most of us feel good about contributing to an institution we believe in. And most volunteers feel good about their service and better about the Temple after getting involved.

And there are times when we feel so grateful for something at Temple that we are just looking for a way to help. For a way to say "thank you." This may occur after a service or event that was particularly moving. Or it may occur after a life cycle event where Temple played a critical role.

But, unfortunately, there are also times when it feels unreasonable, or even absurd for Temple to ask for more. "How can Temple ask me for money when I could barely cover my bills this month?" Or: "How can Temple expect me to help coordinate an event when I feel as if I haven't had a moment to think in weeks?" Or even worse: "Why should I stay a member at that place when they can't get my mother's yahrzeit correct? Or some board member was disrespectful to one of my suggestions?"

"How can I affiliate when I can't afford it?" is relatively easy to answer. Temple is ready to welcome anyone at any dues level if there is a demonstrated interest in membership and a desire to help support the very real expenses of running this institution.

"Why affiliate when I don't have time to participate in services or activities?" is a little harder. Ideally we answer this question by pointing out that we shouldn't expect to just find time for the crucial things that Temple provides. We need to make time for learning, We need to make time for community. We need to make time to develop a spiritual life that will be nourishing through good times and bad. But not everyone can, or does make this time.

There will inevitably times when it is hard to give money to Temple. And there may be times when it is hard to even stay affiliated. So we must prepare for these times. We need to have ready answers to the question "Why affiliate at all?"

Of course, not everyone asks this question. For some who grew up as Temple members and membership is "simply what you do." But for many, this is a very difficult and very important question.

I believe that the synagogue is the heart of the Jewish community. I believe that membership is important even if you feel you can't afford it. And I believe in it for people who only come a few times a year. I believe it is our duty to support the synagogue for those who need it now. And I believe it is responsible to support it for whenever your need may come.

Finally, I believe it is an honor to continue to support an institution that has provided so much for so many for so long.

We become members of a synagogue for the things we want:
religious services
Hebrew School
social events
educational opportunities

We become members of a synagogue for the things we need:
support for the sick
support for the bereaved
support for those who cannot pay for these services

We become members of a synagogue for ourselves...for our families...for the community...for the continuity of the Jewish people, because we know it is the right thing to do.

We are very fortunate at Temple Beth David. We have our local community and we are part of a larger Rochester Jewish community. We have a place to follow the Jewish calendar and identify with other Jews. We have a place that offers a spiritual home, a place where we can learn and grow Jewishly. A place where we can celebrate and a place we can find support in times of need.

So this evening I ask you to re-join Temple Beth David and re-commit to making it the best that it can be. Feel good about your membership dues, and please make a generous contribution to our critical annual Kol Nidre fund raiser. Continue to be a part of this community and bless us all with your time, with your money and with your hopes.

Thank You. L'Shanah Tovah.

minyanim for prayer, comfort, and support.

In times of joy, we celebrate together. Last year on Sukkot, almost half of our community ate a meal in our Sukkah - some for the very first time in their lives. The lighting, the food, and the shared bodily warmth from sitting so close together created an atmosphere in the Sukkah that made people glow. Last Purim, our Religious School children and our Sisterhood ladies made mishloach manot baskets - and when one little girl dropped by unexpectedly with the very well-thought out treats, the surprised woman cried out, "I feel like I just won the lottery!" And in a way, she did. Often we act as though comfort and luxury were the chief requirements of life, when all that we need to make us really happy is something to be enthusiastic about.

We live in abundance. We have true tenders of the garden in our midst. In Arthur's and my back yard, the Temple's front yard, we have an eternal fountain - spilling forth plum tomatoes as well as other vegetables.

Last year many of us became engaged - not necessarily to each other, but, certainly, with each other. We formed a learning chavurah, which started out with my accidentally missing our first learning session by not paying attention to what time it was at kiddush, and last month they told me, "hey, Rabbi, we're starting in the Small Sanctuary whether you're there or not."

And let's certainly not forget about the children. Although we are not yet blessed with great numbers of noisy children, we have been blessed with the ruach (spirit) of young life this past year. We celebrated two brisses and a baby naming - a two hundred percent increase over two years ago. And our Religious School children are leading the way in Tikkun Olam, volunteering at Foodlink, and remembering, connecting with, and caring for our older members,

And what about our Religious School children's parents and teachers? These patient and sometimes tired parents are actively involved in their children's educations. Why? Because a secular education just isn't enough. A parent or a Religious School teacher first taught Albert Einstein that we are all our brothers' keepers. Another one explained to Dr. Jonas Salk the value of choosing life. Henrietta Szold learned in Hebrew School to "Love your neighbor as yourself." And a caring teacher or parent encouraged a boy named David Green to join a youth group in Russia and he grew up to become David Ben-Gurion.

We have a good foundation - and when the foundation is strong, everything else will work out. We live in one of the greatest civilizations that ever existed, although it has its problems right now. And even though we also have our problems and challenges, Temple Beth David is probably doing better than the United States of America! We own our own building. We don't have any debt. We have children in our school who are learning wonderful values. The ruach (spirit) of the founders echoes throughout our sacred space, from the floorboards to the vaulted ceiling. We look out on the beauty of nature. What could be better?

Continuing through this year, we will create together, and hopefully, argue with one another be'shem shamayim (in the name of heaven). Who we are is a phenomenal cast of characters, talented people, and thoughtful, hard-working core groups of members.

We all come here because we mean well, we ache to do good, and we yearn to find meaning in our singular and communal embodiment of Judaism. To sustain ourselves requires that we commit to continual growth and an evolving perspective as we adapt to our changing world. We won't know who we can become until we make a deep commitment to who we are now. When we accept ourselves, we will tap into the deep resources that lie within us. Like the power that emerges at times from performing mitzvot when they feel like a burden, creativity stems from not giving up or giving in during difficult times. Both spiritual growth and creativity burst forth from inspired dreaming. My favorite saying of Albert Einstein is "Imagination is more important than knowledge." And it just noses out, "Great spirits have always encountered violent opposition from mediocre minds."

We all have the ability to become great spirits. This is our space and our time. On the wall of the Abraham Lincoln Memorial in Washington D.C. it is written: "In this Temple as in the hearts of the people for whom he saved the Union, the memory of Abraham Lincoln is enshrined forever." -- In this Temple as in the hearts of all of you who preserve this unity, the ruach and the memory of your neshamahs will be enshrined forever.

One of my mentors has said, "Jews lost many things in the course of history, their land, their home, their city Jerusalem, their holy of holies, their temple; -- sometimes they lost their lives. But never did they lose their hope. Jews kept hope alive, and hope kept the Jewish people alive. And if you were to ask me what difference faith makes, I would say: faith is the ability to know the worst and yet remain committed to the best, to know how cruel life can be and yet never ever to despair. Faith is the courage to hope."

I hope that we will create a giant, morphing Venn diagram, where all of our lives intersect one another's.

And I hope that we will continue to struggle and create and pray together.

But most of all, I hope that those who follow us will build upon the foundation that we deepen, climb into the heavens, reach out to us, and say, "thank you for making that vow so many years ago, -- to never, ever give up on our future."

B'virkat Shalom,

Rabbi Aviva Berg
(My gracious thanks for the words and inspiration of Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sacks and Rabbi David Wolpe, that helped me prepare this message).

Green Tip of the Month by Karen Berger

Don't put those fall leaves out with your trash. Organic matter doesn't decay naturally in a landfill: it combines with the non-organic garbage to release methane gas, which causes atmospheric warming 20 times more potent than carbon dioxide. If you don't have too many leaves, a mulching mower can mulch them right into your yard. If your area has yard waste pick-up, ask if it is going to a regional compost site, or if possible, add the leaves to your own compost pile.

Ongoing Tzedakah Opportunity!

Bring in a non-perishable food item for Jewish Family Services' food cupboard. All non-perishables are appreciated. No glass, please.

Temple Beth David's November, 2011 Lifelong Learning

Community and Connection: Mini-Global Day of Jewish Learning: “Can You Hear Me Now: The Wisdom of the Sh’ma”

Shabbat Learning: Finding and Expressing the Blessings in our Lives

In Cheshvan (Oct. 28th - Nov. 26th) we will explore Traditional and non-Traditional ways to find blessings and express gratitude in our lives. “Blessing offers us a personal consciousness-raising practice, a spiritual adventure bringing sensitivity and gratitude into the foreground of our lives. While we all have moments when a blessing rises spontaneously to our lips, the path of blessing can become a way of life.” Introduction to Rabbi Marcia Prager’s “The Path of Blessing.”

Community and Connection: On November 13th, from 7:00 - 9:00 pm, at the JCC, the Rochester Jewish Community is presenting a mini-Global Day of Jewish Learning. Cantor Ellen Dreskin, an inspired singer, educator, and storyteller, will offer an hour’s presentation: “Can You Hear Me Now: The Wisdom of the Sh’ma,” followed by text study facilitated by three local rabbis, including Rabbi Berg. Come and enjoy the evening and the blessings!

On Shabbat, November 19th, after kiddush in the Small Sanctuary, we will study, discuss, and engage in sharing, discovering and experiencing the blessings of our lives. Rabbi Berg will facilitate our community learning.

News from Hebrew School

Marcy Berger, Principal

Hebrew school 3rd to 7th graders enjoyed their visit with 3 of the teachers from the Modi’in delegation. They made sukkah decorations and hung them up. They watched a presentation about Israel and had lots of time to ask questions. The pomegranate and paper cut decorations in the sukkah were gifts from 2nd graders at Dorot School in Modi’in—the school with which we have a partnership.

News from Administration

Helen Kashtan, VP Administration hkashtan@frontiernet.net

We have some exciting happenings in the Temple Office.

We will begin using our new donation cards by December. These were designed by Bruce Kielar and we thank him for this work. There are two cards, one to commemorate special events and the other for memorial contributions. The photo on the memorial card was taken by Bruce. The photo used on the new memorial contributions card was taken by board member Bruce Kielar and the Star of David was found on a building in the village of Taormina Sicily while on vacation in the Mediterranean.

We have been upgrading office systems in response to the advancement of projects that Maria completes on behalf of Temple and our congregants. We anticipate software upgrades this coming year, including our accounting software and our congregational records software. Additionally, we need an external back-up drive to ensure redundancy. If you would like to sponsor some of these items, please let us know.

We hope that you are enjoying our weekly email updates. If you are not receiving these and have an email address, please let Maria know. She will add you to the recipient list.

Please remember that you can forward these emails to others in the community.

I'd like to thank Maria for her work during a very busy Summer and High Holy Day period.

L'Shalom, Helen

Calling all Hanukkah Bakers!

For the fourth year, Temple Beth David will be sending Hanukkah Care Packages and cards to Jewish soldiers serving overseas. This year we are looking for donations of items to include in the packages.

First, we are calling all Hanukkah bakers to make cookies and other baked goods to be sent to soldiers. Last year, several Temple members baked for the soldiers and they were thankful to receive home baked treats to help them celebrate the holiday.

Second, Hanukkah cards, especially handmade or decorated by children. The soldiers loved getting cards and were very thrilled to receive cards from children.

Lastly, we are requesting personal care items such as: soap, shampoo, deodorant, toothbrushes, toothpaste, and baby wipes.

We ask that all donations be dropped at the Temple office by Sunday, December 4 in order to provide time to be shipped around the world.

If you have any questions or would like someone to pick up your donation (especially baked goods) please contact Keith Freedman at kdfreedy@aol.com.
