“In the Presence of Angels”

Many years ago, I read the book, The Jew in the Lotus: A Poet's Rediscovery of Jewish Identity in Buddhist India by the poet Roger Kamenetz. The book chronicles a meeting in Dharamsala, India between the Dalai Lama and eight very diverse Jewish delegates. Reading Parshat Va'Yeitze last month, and thinking about the future of our Temple Beth David community, it caused me to think about The Jew in the Lotus. Parshat Va'Yeitze, like The Jew in the Lotus, is a spiritual adventure story about religious belief, exile, and survival.

In the book, the Dalai Lama, who was forced to flee from Tibet for his life wants to understand how Jews survived outside of their land for millenia, gets some very surprising answers from his hand-picked Jewish support network. In addition to the very practical comment from Blu Greenberg, who advised, “well, we weren't celibate,” the Kabbalist, Rabbi Jonathan Omer Man, tells the Dalai Lama a midrash about angels. Not only does every person have at least one angel assigned to him or her, he explained, every blade of grass has an angel cheering it on, blowing on it, and encouraging it to grow. The Dalai Lama likes that story very much, and like Jacob, was inspired and encouraged, by the vision of malachim - angels.

In the opening verses of Parshat Va'Yeitze we read: “Jacob left Beer-sheba, and set out for Haran. He encountered a certain place and stopped there for the night, for the sun had set. Taking one of the stones of that place, he put it under his head and lay down in that place. He had a dream; a stairway was set on the ground and its top reached to the sky, and angels of God were going up and down on it.” (Genesis 28:10-12)

Jacob, alone and running for his life from the wrath of his older brother, sees in this heavenly vision proof of God's protection. Twenty years later, and at the end of our parashah, Jacob finally returns to the Land of Israel with his family, after living with and working for his father-in-law, Laban. In the next -to-last verse of our parashah, the Torah tells us: “Jacob went on his way, and angels of God encountered him.” (Genesis 32:2) So, we might ask, what does the Torah teach us by framing Jacob's time in Haran with the vision of angels?

One perspective is that in leaving his home, and serving Laban for twenty years with no news of or from his nuclear family, Jacob faced more than ordinary hardship; he faced a trial that called into question the meaning and purpose of his life. Under the circumstances, we would certainly understand if, at any point during his stay with Uncle Laban, Jacob would have despaired of ever regaining his freedom and providing for his growing family. But throughout his difficult times, Jacob's resolve never seems to waver. Perhaps because the Torah tells us twice that Jacob encountered

News from the President

Helen Kashtan

hkashtan@frontiernet.net

What an honor to have been nominated for and elected to become President of the Board of Trustees at Temple Beth David! The Board members and I are looking forward to the opportunities that are before us, as we strive to continue the legacy of forward thinking individuals who founded Temple Beth David.

I would like to say thank you to Martin Presberg, immediate Past President, and Sy Zivan, our most recent VP, Finance. Their efforts on behalf of Temple have left a significant impact, and added yet another layer to the foundation for our community. Thank you as well to Board of Trustee members past, present and future. You represent both a cross section of our membership and our congregation's interests. For all, the work can sometimes be exciting, pose interesting questions leading to possibly unexpected answers, or even seemingly mundane. It is all done, however, with the best for Temple in mind.

The coming two years will actually provide us with many opportunities, including the opportunity to dream. We will continue to provide a spiritual home or presence, a place for community connections, opportunities for tikkun olan, learning, and more... and a place to apply our skills. Please respond when asked to help.

We rely on our volunteer people resources to accomplish what other organizations do with paid staff. Can you bake? Can you operate a computer or cash register? Can you practice Hebrew reading with children? Can you lead a committee? Can you commit two hours a year or two hours a month or two hours a week? When you receive a phone call or email asking what you can do, please respond with "Yes, I would love to....."

You might wonder why I mentioned the opportunity to dream. The Farash Foundation, founded by Max and Marian Farash, has announced new grant funding opportunities to support the Jewish community throughout Monroe County. The Foundation seeks to create opportunities for collaboration in the larger community. We have submitted several submissions in the first phase of the process. These identify programs that can begin at TBD, with an eye toward growth and eventual impact for the larger Jewish community.

Thank you for the opportunity to serve as president.

angels – both times using the same Hebrew word, va-yifga – we are to understand that not only at the beginning and end of his trial but throughout his entire journey, Jacob was accompanied by angels, angels who guarded him, supported him, and gave him the strength he needed to overcome the challenges that confronted him.

Like our ancestor, Jacob, each of us, individually, and together as a community, will face existential trials – not merely hard times, but challenges that make us face the darkest parts of our souls. When this happens, it is important for us to know, like Jacob, that we do not face these trials alone. Parshat Va'Yeitze, beginning and ending with Heavenly visions, teaches each one of us that even during the most difficult times of our lives, and like each blade of grass struggling to breathe free, we are surrounded by angels, whether we know it or not.

In the “real,” material world, individuals who provide expertise, encouragement, and often necessary resources to help support individuals or small companies get on their feet or transition as they adapt to changing circumstances are called “angels.” -- We are in the midst of these kinds of angels, as well as the Heavenly kind, here in Rochester.

Many of you know about the Farash Foundation and its mission, which is, in part, to enhance a vibrant, inclusive Jewish community in Monroe and Ontario Counties. Max and Marian Farash, the founders of this foundation, are undeniably malchei Elohim, (God's angels), in every sense of the term. Together they cared enough about the community that supported them to leave it a legacy of possibility and hope. Three women, Hollis Budd, Isobel Goldman and Judy Azoff, whom many of you may know, are the three angels with whom all Rochester-area synagogues and Jewish organizations will relate, to help us redefine, reinvigorate, and reposition ourselves in our changing world.

We have been given the opportunity to dream and to make our dreams a reality. Throughout December and the beginning of January, these three lovely women want to hear about our dreams, support our creative and collaborative ideas, and help us bring our ideas to fruition.

Sometimes, as in the case of the Dalai Lama, it takes a special sensitivity to see a group of eight Jews as angels who would help him navigate the Tibetan-Buddhists on their way through the perils of exile. Sometimes, as in the case of Jacob, it takes fearing for one's life, losing touch with one's immediate family and living in exile to open oneself to the possibility of experiencing well-being and spiritual transformation. For us, it will take knowing, really knowing at our deepest level, that we are in the presence of angels, who want to help us survive as a community during our period of transformation. We are in the presence of angels who will become a part of our dreams - so that we need not be afraid because of what we have lost - but rather, so that we may dream about who we might become.

Like Jacob, may God protect and defend us on our journey. May God preserve us from pain along our way. Most of all, may God favor us with happiness and peace.

B'virkat Shalom,

Rabbi Aviva Berg

Green Tip of the Month: by Karen Berger

To make sure your heating system (boiler, furnace or heat pump) is operating at its most efficient, it is a good idea to have a contractor perform a routine check-up and any necessary maintenance on the equipment before freezing weather drives up your energy bill. If your heating equipment more than ten years old, it may be time for a replacement to a more energy-efficient unit. While initially an expensive investment, replacing old equipment with ENERGY STAR qualified equipment saves more energy and money in the long run.
