"Relationships are Portable, Mountains are Not"

In 2006, our family moved to Japan. It wasn't a difficult decision. We were hoping for an amazing adventure, and Corning, Inc., the company that my husband Harrison works for, is well-known for sending its employees to the far corners of the globe. If you work for Corning, it's something you have to think about. It's a conversation you might want to have with your spouse - even years in advance. Because if the time comes that you are asked whether or not you would consider moving abroad we were told, it's best to have that answer prepared. So when Harrison came home five years after he started his career at Corning, Inc. to tell me that he had been asked to move to Japan, I knew he had already told them yes. As a courtesy, Corning tells you to go home and talk this over with your spouse and family.

But we were prepared. We were...thrilled...nervous...ecstatic... honored. We absolutely knew that our lives were about to explode...in a good way...in a great way!

There are so many unbelievable sights to take in when you visit Japan. Virtually every time my eyes moved I was amazed by the exquisite beauty of something... a kimono, the way people dressed, or wrapped something...a beautiful neighborhood Shinto shrine... or I would turn my head and I would be dazzled by something! Incredible sky high buildings, row after row, with flashing neon lights, noises from pachinko parlors, or by the silence of hundreds of people.

With all of the visual distractions that Japan has to offer, the ultra modern architecture, from the hi-tech street scenes, down to the most ancient Japanese attire and temples there was only ONE thing that truly captures the symbol of Japan - Mount Fuji. On a clear day you can see it from miles and miles. It can disappear for days... and then all of a sudden Fuji-san appears, so clear, and so distinct, beckoning to us to behold its majesty. Mt. Fuji is an awesome sight, rising more than twelve-thousand feet above sea level. There are many odd and unusual stories, myths, and legends surrounding Mt. Fuji. Stories about how it was created and who rules over it. The volcano Mt. Fuji is located on Honshu Island.

Fuji-san is the highest mountain in Japan. The volcano now lies dormant, the last eruption ending in January of 1707 when it covered Tokyo. Mt. Fuji has been the home to many things. It has been known as the home of a fire god, the Shinto goddess of flowing trees, and since Buddhist times the dwelling of Dainichi Nyorai, who was the Buddah of All-Illuminating Wisdom. One of the deities of Mt. Fuji is known as Sengen, the goddess of Fiji.

The mission of Temple Beth David is to provide an environment where the concepts of community prayer, education, and service to the greater Jewish community are provided within the context of Conservative Judaism. We pride ourselves on being a friendly, participatory, egalitarian community, welcoming all to be a part of our synagogue family.

("Radiant-blooming-as-the-flowers-of-the-trees"). Her temple is at the very top of Fuji. She was said to, in ancient times, sit on a cloud while her invisible servants threw in any pilgrims who were not pure of heart. Once you live in Japan, or visit for long enough, you get to know Mt. Fuji. Fuji-san is more than a mountain. It is a yearning, a humbling and a destination.

Pilgrims have been climbing the mountain as a show of religious piety for generations. There are records from June of 1500 C.E. describing the masses of people making journeys up the sacred mountain. Now every summer, close to 500,000 people make trips up the mountain. Fiji-san has been regarded as a sacred mountain for virtually as long as humans have lived nearby. Seeing it up close, having climbed Mt. Fuji all the way to the top, I can attest to Fuji's brilliance and majesty. I have seen Mt. Fuji from every angle, and no matter how many photos I had on my iphone and my camera, when Fuji-san comes into view, you snap that picture and there is something pulling, magnetic... it is hard to explain.

Before we moved to Japan I would have told you that there was nothing in common with Judaism and Japanese culture. But the longer we lived there, the more we began to feel a synergy between our Jewish culture and Japanese ancient rhythms. Portable shrines in every neighborhood, a focus on honoring our ancestors, and to be honest, this mountain, that had really gotten deep into all of our kishkes.

It occurred to me how I had never before revered a mountain before. Even though our own tradition teaches that the Torah was given on mount Sinai in this week's Torah portion, if you begin to do some research, you will find that there is no conclusive agreement from scholars as to the precise location of Mt. Sinai. To this day, it is still quite unclear. And yet, we read that Mount Sinai was all in smoke, and the whole mountain trembled greatly. G-d had come down upon the mountain in fire.

Our most transformative, covenantal experience...and we don't exactly know where Mount Sinai is. We don't focus on where our covenantal relationship was solidified. We focus on the relationship, a relationship that allowed us to experience a one time and timeless contract, but one that also pushed us to move ahead, wandering in the desert with our portable sanctuary, taking it with us wherever we went.

What we, what our Israelite ancestors took away with them from Sinai were the teachings, the relationships that would follow us wherever we went. And as we stand witness today, that still follow us.

Two parts of my life, two mountains looming in my collective unconscious, Mount Sinai and Mount Fuji.

Mount Sinai is described by the rabbis as not being the highest and most splendid mountain. In fact, it is described as being the lowest of all the mountains which might have been chosen. And yet, G-d chose Mount Sinai for the Giving of the Torah. The rabbis teach, in order to teach an important message: to tell us that humility is a prerequisite to the learning of Torah.

After my experiences in Japan, I agree with the first part of the midrash: That G-d chose Mt. Sinai because it was the lowest mountain. But I believe it was in order to teach us that it is not the place.... but the experience. It is not where the Torah was given, but the relationship that was solidified, and the teachings that were bestowed upon us that we are to focus on. As Jews, we take with us THE EXPERIENCE, not the place. This is the mechanism that has allowed us to be in every corner of the earth, re-enacting the experience wherever we are. It is the reason we were able to flourish as Jews during our years in Japan, under the imposing and magnificent shadow of Mount Fuji.

Even though I have hundreds of pictures of Mt. Fuji from every angle, from train, plane and from the tops of buildings... there is another, mysterious mountain that has captured my heart. I don't know where it is exactly, but my ancestors stood there thousands of years ago. And from that moment, they too carried with them the receiving of the Torah and kept walking, transformed by the experience.

News from the President

Helen Kashtan    hkashtan@frontiernet.net

In early February, the Rochester Area Synagogue Presidents Council heard the final report from Rabbi Lou Feldstein, of Dynamic Change Solutions, about our two-year, community-wide look into collaboration. As you may recall from earlier messages, Rabbi Feldstein was hired by the Council to study the synagogues in our community with an eye toward collaboration and engagement. This was funded by a grant from the Farash Foundation.

The report noted that our community desires moving forward with collaborative engagement, with the goal of engaging the non-affiliated and better engaging synagogue members. With better engagement we have the opportunity to strengthen synagogues. Rabbi Feldstein, based on the input of many in Rochester, benchmarking with other community and national trends, identified specific ideas for activities, each ranked by level of effort and strength of the potential outcome/impact. Want more details? See me or Neal Eckhaus, who has been attending Council meetings with me!

What’s next?

Well, it feels a bit like sending a child off to college (okay, so 15 years ago I may have used kindergarten as a reference!). We’ve been talking about this for two years.

We’ve received great insights and training from Rabbi Feldstein. We now have an understanding of what collaboration can look like and, more importantly, have developed relationships of trust with other synagogues and their leadership. And now we have to take those first steps on our own. The presidents of area synagogues will meet in early March to discuss the next steps and I look forward to reporting what we come up with.

This process has impacted Beth David already, in truly meaningful ways.

- With Rabbi’s medical leave (which begins March 2), we have been offered support by other synagogue lay and clergy leadership. As you know, we are celebrating Purim with two other synagogues and this may not have been so easily possible without the trusting relationships that have developed during this process.
- As we progress with the sale of our building we have received sound advice and support from other synagogues, as well as ideas for our future space needs. This couldn’t have been possible without having developed the camaraderie that I’ve developed with other synagogue leaders these past two years.

As in the business world, we in synagogues are in the business of developing and growing relationships. Personally, I truly feel a stronger connection to our Rochester Jewish community and I hope, as we move forward, that this feeling will spread to members of Temple Beth David and other synagogues in the community. And, yes, my trips to Wegmans take a little longer than in the past...as I meet up with folks that I met because of the Council and the community-wide Board sessions we held with Rabbi Feldstein.

Thank you to:

- the Farash Foundation for supporting this effort
- Susan Itkin (a former president at Temple Sinai) for bringing the Council together
- the RASP Council members for being a great group of people to be with
- community leaders, like Larry Fine at the Jewish Community Federation, who provided much guidance
- our TBD board members who have participated in training and activities
- Rabbi Feldstein for leading us from the idea of collaboration to a place where we can begin community-wide collaboration

I'shalom,
Helen

Passover Soldier's Project

The Soldiers Project is a year round effort by Temple to serve Jewish Soldiers both over-seas and in the U.S. In the past, Temple has sent care packages for Purim, Pesach, Rosh Hashanah and Hanukah.

If you would like to contribute to the Soldier's Project, please send your donation to Temple Beth David with Soldiers Project in the memo line.

Your help is greatly appreciated!
